

WE NEED MORE HANDS

The greatest environmental disaster the United States of America has ever faced began after an explosion on an offshore drilling unit. Millions of litres of oil would be released into the Gulf of Mexico. Almost two years on, this oil continues to devastate the eco-system while media from the U.S and around the world have all but forgotten the area. The Gulf Restoration Network needed to bring attention back to the area and ask people to support their actions in tackling this disaster. This postcard was created and sent out as a call for help on a forgotten issue.
