INAUGURAL LINDAUER NATIONAL GIRLS' NIGHT OUT

The first National Girls' Night Out went off with a bang, celebrations popping up all around the city as the ladies took back the town. It was bubbles without the boys and dancing shoes firmly on as they made it an event to remember. Early evening the night began with a gallery opening at the Art House. Anyone who thought admiring art was a quiet affair would have learnt their lesson Friday when Riley Edwards and Rachel Moyle hosted the girls for their first exhibition of the year. It was a truly unmissable night, their fabulous works completely sold out. Purchases were made by the likes of queen of the screen Annabel Dondell and a certain music mogul we can't name because he wants to keep his presence in New Zealand on the down low!

KRISY'S BOOK LAUNCH

It may have technically been a night all about the latest in her series Leopard heels in a concrete jungle, but there was more than that on show. All the girls had a story or three to share, not that any of those were allowed out of the building - it's never a quiet one at a Krisy Layton take on Girls' Night Out! Eloise MacDonald, Ida Hughes and Sarah Jack were all spotted amongst the attendees trying to make their way inconspicuously through the back door. Who wants to stay at home with a book when you've got local talent and a crowd like this to entertain you?

SALSA WITH THE GIRLS FROM NZ FILM BAREFOOT AT BETHELLES

Simone Algie and Katy Levick were just a couple of the big screen stars who decided to mix it up a little on Friday. They were spotted attending the salsa fiesta EnZed on air hosted at the waterfront to celebrate the success of their latest film. Starting with a few tapas and a glass of sparkling, the evening soon got going with stars unable to resist showing off their skills with a step or three. It was all feet on the dance floor as the night continued - the girls making the most of getting it all to themselves for once with moves that would put even Gangnam style to shame!

AMY WESTLAKE FASHION DEBUT

There was no better time than National Girls' Night Out to launch what is rumoured to be the line of the year. It was a fashion fest all round with designer Amy Westlake encouraging members of the crowd to strut their stuff in their favourite garment of the night as she toasted a great show with New Zealand's favourite bubbly. Amongst the guests was assistant Bella Fitzgerald, who was on form as she led the charge at the after party. The young designer's clothing was clearly a hit with pieces snapped up by musician Kara McCarthey and a fair few lacy numbers packaged up for the girls to take home, ready for the next big event.
