

Park up here and you'll strike it lucky. Something about the way the current flows through the channel, this place is just a mecca for the fish. And because you discovered it, you figured no one else needs to know. You could just keep it between you and the sealife. But as you lie in the water, still groggy from the fall, the boat and all forms of communication drifting away, you realise that keeping this secret fishing spot secret was a seriously bad idea.

