

Words alone don't teach people. They reveal. And we need to get at understanding words. Words don't let us see the world and correct our mistakes. For the long path, we need experience. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like teacher training, as well as providing books and science equipment. Because we'd be rather do something useful to them, get 'em about it.

and here's the bit at the bottom of the ad that you can't read because of website resolution

Words alone don't teach people. They cannot hold our hand or give an encouraging smile. Words don't lean over our shoulder and correct our mistakes. Nor do they guide us with experience. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like teacher training as well as providing books and science equipment. Because we'd far rather do something about it, than just talk about it.

Words don't fill gardens. You cannot rest beneath them or swing from their branches. They don't create shade nor provide home to birds and small animals. They don't clean the air, nor blossom in Spring. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like planting trees and creating urban forests. Because we'd far rather do something about it, than just talk about it.

Words don't fill gardens. You cannot rest beneath them or swing from their branches. They don't create shade nor provide home to birds and small animals. They don't clean the air, nor blossom in Spring. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like planting trees and creating urban forests. Because we'd far rather do something about it, than just talk about it.

Words don't heal the sick. They don't cure disease or ease an aching body. They cannot fill a drip or be taken twice daily. Words won't bring color back to someone's cheeks. Nor can they break a fever and stop a cold sweat. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like providing HIV treatment and orphan care for rural communities. Because we'd far rather do something about it, than just talk about it.

sasol
reaching new frontiers

Words don't heal the sick. They don't cure disease or ease an aching body. They cannot fill a drip or be taken twice daily. Words won't bring colour back to someone's cheeks. Nor can they break a fever and stop a cold sweat. Words alone do nothing. That's why we're doing things like providing HIV treatment and orphan care for rural communities. Because we'd far rather do something about it, than just talk about it.

Words can't save a species. They can't hold off extinction or provide food for animals to come back out the earth with a new litter of pups, or monitor their growth. Words can do nothing that we're doing things like protecting endangered species such as wild dog as well as building practical conservation education for communities. Because we'd be rather do something about it than just talk about it.

Words can't save a species. They can't hold off extinction or provide land for animals to roam. Words will not watch over a new litter of pups, nor monitor their growth. Words can do nothing. That's why we're doing things like protecting endangered species such as Wild Dog as well as providing practical conservation education for communities. Because we'd far rather do something about it than just talk about it.